The National Association of State Boating Law Administrators (NASBLA) is a professional association consisting of state, commonwealth and provincial officials having responsibilities for administering and/or enforcing state boating laws. NASBLA promotes boating safety by providing a medium for the exchange of views and experiences; fostering interstate and federal-state cooperation and coordination in boating problems; promoting greater uniformity in laws and regulations; increasing efficiency in administration and enforcement of boating laws; and, as feasible and desirable, promoting consensus of state views on any subject within the Association's interest, including effective presentation and dissemination of those views.

FOREWORD

On behalf of the National Association of State Boating Law Administrators (NASBLA), I am pleased to present the Fifth Edition of the Reference Guide to State Boating Laws. More than five years ago, this reference document was just a thought in a visionary mind. Through the hard work of the NASBLA Law Enforcement Committee and staff, this book has become the reference tool for recreational boating safety professionals, and it gets better each year.

This Fifth Edition provides updated information collected in the summer and fall of 1999. You'll notice in this edition, we've taken a look back at some of the data from the past five years and given you some snapshots of where we've come. We see more boating education requirements today than we did five years ago. State laws are tougher on people who boat under the influence of drugs or alcohol than they were five years ago.

NASBLA intends for this document to continue for many years to come. It's become one of the many tools that assist us in advancing our goals of uniformity and reciprocity for boating laws across the nation. As always, we invite your comments or suggestions regarding the Reference Guide. In particular, we'd like to know if there is additional information we should try to capture for future editions. Please send them to our headquarters office. We appreciate your input and hope you find the Reference Guide useful.

President, NASBLA

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The purpose of this guide is to summarize the information that was gathered in a survey of states' boating laws. The survey was conducted by the National Association of State Boating Law Administrators' (NASBLA) Law Enforcement Committee. The guide will assist state boating law administrators and others to improve state boating law programs. It provides information about specific state boating laws, regulations, and other areas of boating safety interest. When developing new policies or instituting new programs, it is common to ask what other states are doing in the area. This report helps provide those answers. The guide aims to promote greater uniformity in state boating laws and regulations and to facilitate the efficient administration and enforcement of boating laws. Copies of this report have been distributed to each state, the U.S. Coast Guard and others concerned with boating safety laws and regulations. The project was funded by a grant from the Aquatic Resources (Wallop/Breaux) Trust Fund administered by the U.S. Coast Guard.

The survey was written in June of 1999 and mailed to state boating law administrators from the fifty United States and territories (District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, U.S. Virgin Islands). Responses were received from all but North Dakota and the Northern Mariana Islands, whose answers remained the same as reported in the Fourth Edition. All answers were taken as fact and have been reported as such. New this year is the addition of information from Ontario, Canada. The Ontario Provincial Police is the largest single agency providing marine policing in Canada's largest marine jurisdiction. In Canada, generally the federal government is constitutionally responsible for law administration and the provinces are responsible for courts and enforcement. Many of the answers given for the Ontario Provincial Police apply across all the Canadian provinces.

All laws detailed in the Reference Guide were in effect as of September, 1999 except as otherwise noted. The laws are subject to change without notice by agencies, states or the United States Coast Guard. Contact the appropriate state boating law administrator for more details on the latest information.

SURVEY OVERVIEW

The survey instrument consists of 191 questions divided into seven sections:

Section 1 - General Information

Section 1 includes information on agency organization, personnel and scope of authority for regulations and enforcement of boating laws.

Section 2 - Vessel Operation

Section 2 includes information on operator age, licensing, education and waterskiing.

Section 3 - Vessel & Equipment Regulations

Section 3 is the largest section of the survey. It addresses boat noise, lighting, marine sanitation devices, numbering and titling, personal watercraft (PWC), personal flotation devices (PFDs) and safety equipment. This section reveals differences in state policies in areas that are not pre-empted by federal regulations.

Section 4 - Law Enforcement

Section 4 covers state boating under the influence (BUI) laws. Included are the blood alcohol intoxication levels for each state and the type of test allowed and required. New in this section is information regarding the availability and legality of portable boating under the influence (BUI) equipment. This section also includes law enforcement information on boarding vessels, towing, and “negligent operation” citations.

Section 5 - Definitions

The source of the definitions are state statutes and regulations. When defining terms such as “vessel,” “person,” “owner,” “dealer,” and “personal watercraft,” most states are in general agreement, but slight differences exist in wording. The notable similarities and differences are addressed in this section.

Section 6 - Marine Law Enforcement Policy

Section 6 includes information concerning marine law enforcement policies. These questions cover topics such as transportation and pursuit, officer safety, officer aid, agency interaction and investigation, officer responsibilities, officer training and agency policies.

Section 7 - Legal Decisions

Section 7 includes information covering state and federal court rulings as well as Attorneys General’s opinions on a variety of topics including BUI, implied consent, personal flotation devices, numbering and titling, marine sanitation devices, agency funding and other relevant topics. Included is a table detailing recent and future boating legislation for each state.

This guide includes results from each section of the survey. Each section of the guide begins with a narrative summary of the information revealed by the survey for that section. Informational boxes accompany the narrative summary, providing a numerical count of states and their responses to designated survey questions. Additionally, this year's Reference Guide includes several graphs showing the trends over the past five years. Since many survey questions required "Yes" or "No" answers, these informational boxes are helpful in quickly determining how states responded to these questions. In many cases, "yes" or "no" answers may not fully answer the question. Contact the appropriate state boating law administrator for more details. "N/A" (uppercase) in place of an answer means "no answer"; n/a (lowercase) means "not applicable". State Tables detail states' particular responses to survey questions at the end of each section. Using State Tables, an individual state response to a particular question can be easily determined. Informational boxes and State Tables summarize the survey questions; for precise wording of survey questions consult Appendix A for a copy of the survey instrument.

GENERAL INFORMATION

Section 1 of the survey contains General Information. The names of state agencies that administer boating laws are unique to each state. Likewise, the cabinet or department the organization is a part of varies among states depending on state constitutions and statutes. Some organizations themselves are cabinet or department level functions of state government while others operate under the authority of another department. For example in Alaska, Colorado, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, South Carolina and Wisconsin state boating laws are administered by the Department of Natural Resources, an autonomous department of state government, while in Alabama the Marine Police Division administers and enforces state boating laws under the authority of the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources. The State Table on page 8 provides a listing of which state government departments administer state boating laws.

AGENCY RESPONSIBILITY

NUMBER OF STATES* WITH:

Agencies with additional responsibilities	56
Personnel deputized to enforce federal fish and game laws	35
Boating safety statutes available electronically	40
Boating safety regulations available electronically	34

Source: NASBLA Reference Guide to State Boating Laws, Fifth Edition, 1999

*Includes District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, U.S. Virgin Islands. Excludes Canada.

AGENCY RESPONSIBILITIES

All state boating law agencies have responsibilities beyond boating law enforcement. Additional responsibilities range from administration of wildlife, environmental, fish and game laws (most common) to forestry, snowmobile, ATV and pollution control.

NUMBER OF REGISTERED VESSELS & FATALITIES

According to survey results there are 13,420,901 registered recreational vessels in the United States, commonwealths and territories. States with the highest number of registered recreational vessels include Michigan (980,381), California (894,725), Florida (809,160) and Minnesota (780,097). Those with the lowest count of registered vessels include American Samoa (89), Northern Mariana Islands (1,000), and the District of Columbia (1,843).

In 1994, there were 760 boating fatalities in the United States, or 6.7 fatalities per 100,000 registered vessels. In 1995, there were 818 fatalities in the United States, or 6.9 fatalities per 100,000 registered vessels. In 1996, there were 725 fatalities in the United States, or 6.0 fatalities per 100,000 registered boats. In 1997, there were 828 fatalities, or 6.7 fatalities per 100,000 registered boats. 1998 figures reflect a drop to 811 fatalities nationwide, or 6.0 fatalities per 100,000 registered boats. According to Coast Guard statistics, fatalities per 100,000 registered vessels was 7.1 in 1993 and 7.3 in 1992. (U.S. Coast Guard Boating Statistics 1993) For individual state statistics of numbered vessels and fatalities see State Tables 1.3, VESSELS & FATALITIES .

RESPONSIBILITY FOR REGULATION AND ENFORCEMENT

The gap is closing between states in their regulation and enforcement of commercial vessels on sole-state waters. The survey revealed that 44 states regulate commercial vessels on sole state waters. State responsibility for commercial vessels not handled by boating law agencies falls to Secretary of State Offices, Departments of Labor and Industry, or Port Authorities. Twenty-nine states regulate vessel operation in white water areas.

DIVE TEAMS

Twenty states reported that their agency had a dive team. Among the states whose agency did not have a dive team, the agency responsible for victim recovery most often were local agencies or county sheriffs' offices.

STATE REGULATORY AUTHORITY

NUMBER OF STATES THAT:

Regulate commercial vessels on sole-state waters	44
Regulate vessel operation in white water areas	29

VESSEL OPERATION

Section 2 of the survey deals with vessel operation. It is divided into three sections: Operator Age, Education, and Water Skiing.

OPERATOR AGE

Thirty-nine states set a minimum age requirement for operating a motor-powered vessel, 17 do not. The minimum age for those states requiring a minimum varies from age 10 to 18. The most common age requirement is 12 years of age (20 states). Illinois and Wisconsin set the lowest age requirement at age 10, and American Samoa sets the highest age requirement at age 18. Thirty-three states require an adult to be on board when a minor is operating a motor vessel. Twenty-eight states require both a minimum age and an adult on board when a minor is operating a motor vessel. Of the 17 states that do not require a minimum operating age, 12 also include no provision to require an adult to be on board when a minor is operating a vessel.

LICENSING AND BOATING EDUCATION

Boater licensing and education is becoming more prevalent, but it is still far from being mandated in most states. The 1988 Boating Safety Manual, produced by the U.S. Coast Guard, shows that in 1988 no states mandated operator licensing or boating safety education. In 1996, four states required some type of licensing and 18 states mandated education. 1997 saw an increase to five states requiring some form of licensing and 22 states mandating education. By 1998, 27 states had some form of mandatory education on the books. The states requiring some type of boater licensing are Alabama, American Samoa, Connecticut, Indiana, New Jersey and Puerto Rico. Twenty-six states require special boater education classes to operate a personal watercraft, up from 17 states requiring PWC education in 1997. Thirty-six states certify minor boaters. Six and eight hour courses for certification are most common.

EDUCATION AND LICENSING

EDUCATION AND LICENSING

While more states are requiring some type of education and licensing, even more states have initiated public education efforts. Thirty-nine states offer boating education in public schools. The total number of students certified in 1994 was 150,560. Michigan, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania certified the most students in 1994, accounting for over 60% of the nation's certified students. In 1995, there were 199,906 certified students; that number grew to 242,665 in 1996, which is a 38% growth rate over those three years. Certifications dropped in 1997; a total of 187,146 students were certified in 27 states. By 1998, however, the number of students certified skyrocketed to 336,150, almost double the amount certified in 1997. Alabama lead the nation with over 70,500 students certified in 1998.

Michigan, Missouri and Florida also had significant numbers of students certified in 1998. These four states account for over 60% of the students certified that year. The type of education varies among states but a sampling includes instruction by U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, U.S. Power Squadrons, Water Patrol and Fish & Game Agencies.

WATER SKIING

Water skiing provides recreation for a great number of boaters. Fifty-five states and territories require a minimum of one observer or mirror when towing a water skier. Only the Northern Mariana Islands reported not requiring either. All states except Alaska and the Northern Mariana Islands prohibit water skiing during some time of the day. The period prohibited is usually dusk to dawn. Forty-one states require skiers to wear personal flotation devices. Tubing, kite sailing or parasailing, and self-propelled water skiing are other forms of boater recreation that have gained increased popularity in recent years. A few states have acted to restrict the practice of some of these activities, but generally states have not adopted specific laws for them. According to the survey, all states allow tubing and parasailing. Only 17 states prohibit the use of self-propelled water skis..

Several of the states surveyed listed other restrictions on water skiing. Thirteen states require the display by vessels of a skier down flag when a skier is in the water. Eight states specifically prohibit skiing while intoxicated. Other requirements of some states include boarding ladders on vessels, observers at least 12 years of age, mandatory use of personal flotation devices, and user restrictions on the length of ski rope.

VESSEL & EQUIPMENT REGULATIONS

Section 3 of the survey relates to Vessel & Equipment Regulations. A number of items were addressed including boat noise, lighting, marine sanitation devices and numbering and titling requirements.

BOAT NOISE

Thirty-one states have a maximum noise level for motor boats; 25 do not. The standard for maximum noise level ranges from 75 to 90 decibels. The standard used by most states is SAE J-2005 and SAE J-1970. Developed by the Society of Automotive Engineers, SAE J-2005 and SAE J-1970 are sound testing procedures that measure the decibel level of stationary and moving motorboats respectively. Using the SAE J-2005 (stationary test), most states set maximum noise levels at 86 to 90 decibels. When the SAE J-1970 (shoreline test) is used, the maximum noise level is commonly 75 decibels. The distance of measurement for most states is 50 feet. Depending on the state and the manufacture date of the motor, maximum noise levels may differ. The penalties for exceeding motor boat noise levels range from $0 to $1000.

Altering factory mufflers is a violation of the law in 32 states. Twenty-two of the 32 states that have muffler alteration laws also have maximum noise levels for motor boats.

NUMBER OF STATES THAT:

Set maximum noise level for motor boats	31
Prohibit altering factory mufflers	32
Allow local ordinances to govern boat noise	12

ANCHOR LIGHTING

For the most part, states have uniform anchor lighting requirements for boats. Only American Samoa, Indiana, and Massachusetts do not require anchor lights. Additionally, 13 states do not specify which vessels must have anchor lights. The U.S. Coast Guard recommends that anchor lights be visible at a distance of two miles. Some states exempt vessels from displaying anchor lights when in special "anchorage areas."

MARINE SANITATION DEVICES

NUMBER OF STATES THAT:

Require Y-valves to be locked in waters of state jurisdiction	30
Mandate marine sanitation devices (MSDs)	27

MARINE SANITATION DEVICES

Federal requirements published by the U.S. Coast Guard state that all recreational boats with installed toilet facilities must have an operable marine sanitation device on board. However, not all states mandate MSDs themselves. Twenty-seven states mandate them, 30 do not. Thirty-nine states prohibit Y-valve through hull discharge in waters of state jurisdiction, while 17 states do not prohibit it. Thirty states require Y- valves to be closed in waters of state jurisdiction.

NUMBERING, TITLING & REGISTRATION

The U.S. Coast Guard requires motor-powered vessels to be registered in the state of principal operation. All states have a federally approved numbering system. The U.S. Coast Guard administers a numbering system in Alaska for vessels equipped with propulsion machinery used on waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. During the registration process, the state issues a certificate of number to the vessel that must be carried on board when the vessel is in use. The number issued to the vessel appears on the certificate of number and must be painted or permanently attached to each side of the forward half of the vessel in block letters, at least 3 inches in height, contrasting in color with hull or background, and not displayed near other letters or numbers to avoid confusion. When a vessel moves to a new state of principle operation, the certificate of number is valid for no less than 60 days.

REGISTRATION AND TITLING

NUMBER OF STATES THAT:

Require registration of motor powered vessels	56
Require titling of motor powered vessels	36
Require titling of outboard motors	8
Require registration of outboard motors	4

Source: NASBLA Reference Guide to State Boating Laws, Fifth Edition, 1999

In accordance with federal requirements, all states require motor-powered vessels to be numbered. In Alaska, the Coast Guard numbers motor powered boats. Thirty-six states require motor powered vessels to be titled, 20 do not. Titling provides a record of legal ownership and is valuable if rightful ownership is contested. In addition to vessels, eight states require outboard motors to be titled. These are Missouri, Northern Mariana Islands, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas, Utah and Virginia. Some states require all outboard motors be titled while others only require those over a certain horsepower to be titled. The penalties for not titling range from no fine to $1000.

Registration and numbering provide states with an identification system for vessels, and detailed records of ownership. Four states currently require registration of outboard motors as well. These are Missouri, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Rhode Island. The penalties for failing to register vessels varies from no fine to $1000 fine and jail time depending on the circumstances. In general, the penalties for failing to register a vessel are more severe than penalties for failing to title a vessel.

NON-POWERED VESSELS

With respect to non-powered vessels, 26 states require non-powered vessels to be registered and 24 states require non-powered vessels to be numbered. Fourteen states require titling for non-powered vessels. Thirteen states require registration and numbering, but not titling, for non-powered vessels. Virginia requires titling, but not registration and numbering, for non-powered sailboats in excess of 18 feet. Seven states require owners of non-powered vessels to pay a user fee.

Many states' titling authority requires an inspection by a law enforcement officer where discrepancies are apparent in hull identification numbers and bills of sale when a vessel or motor is sold and a title application is submitted. Thirty-eight states reported requiring an inspection under such circumstances.

NON-POWERED VESSELS

NUMBER OF STATES THAT:

Require non-powered vessels to be numbered	24
Require non-powered vessels to be registered	26
Require non-powered vessels to be titled	14
Require owners of non-powered vessel to pay a user fee	7

PERSONAL WATERCRAFT

Personal watercraft use has dramatically increased over the past several years. The vessel's maneuverability, speed, and limited protection can be a dangerous combination. States have responded by issuing minimum age requirements for PWC operation. Fifty-one states have a minimum age requirement and 33 states require an adult to be on board when a minor is operating a PWC, up from 27 states requiring an adult on board in 1995. Fifty-two states require PWC operators and passengers to wear personal flotation devices. Fifty states prohibit use of PWCs during some time of the day or night, as compared to 40 states prohibiting their use at some time of the day or night in 1995.

Personal watercraft are capable of reaching high speeds in short distances. Most states do not have a speed limit for personal watercraft. The number of states which have set a specific speed limit increased from six states in 1994 to 13 states in 1998. In other states, unsafe personal watercraft activity is deterred by enforcing “negligent operation” statutes. Thirty-seven states prohibit PWC operation in specific zones, up from 28 states in 1997. There is also a significant split about the issue of wake jumping. Forty-four states impose specific limitations on wake jumping with PWCs. North Dakota, Rhode Island and the Virgin Islands are the only states that prohibit wake jumping. Limitations range from activity that “unnecessarily endangers life, limb, or property” to no operation within 100 yards of another vessel. More common among states is a “no operation within 100 feet of another vessel” restriction on wake jumping. Alabama is unique as the only state that prohibits wake jumping of vessels traveling in the same direction as the PWC.

A safety feature on many personal watercraft is a lanyard or “kill switch” that automatically disengages the motor if an operator is displaced from the craft or if the craft is not upright. A PWC “kill switch” requirement is mandated in 40 states.

PERSONAL FLOTATION DEVICES

Turning to the general wearing of personal flotation devices (PFDs), or life jackets as they are more commonly known, states are moving towards uniformity. Fifty-one states mandate the wearing of PFDs, up from 44 states mandating wear in 1996. The circumstances of a PFD mandate vary among states. A common requirement is that children under age 12 must wear a PFD while on board a vessel. Other states mandate their use just when water skiing or operating a personal watercraft.

As of May 1, 1995 federal law stipulates that every vessel less than 16 feet in length must be equipped with one Type I, II, or III PFD for each person on board. Type IV PFDs - which are not intended to be worn, but thrown to an overboard passenger - do not meet the federal requirement. Type IV PFDs include buoyant cushions, ring buoys, and horseshoe buoys. Forty- eight states have changed their requirements on Type IV PFDs to be consistent with federal law. Penalties for violating PFD laws range from a $25 fine to a $1,000 fine and jail time for excessively repeating violations.

SAFETY EQUIPMENT

Federal law requires that vessels be equipped with specific safety devices. These include gas ventilation devices, flame arresters, fire extinguishers, visual distress signals, and sound producing devices. Most states did not report any difference in their law from federal requirements. The few that did report differences included requiring safety equipment for smaller vessels than federal law requires.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Section IV of the survey relates to law enforcement. Issues addressed include operating a vessel under the influence of an intoxicant and regulations for marine enforcement officers.

BOATING UNDER THE INFLUENCE

This section deals primarily with boating under the influence (BUI) laws. All states reported having boating under the influence laws. Blood intoxication levels range from .02 to .10 depending on the state. Thirty-four states now use .10 as the legal limit, and 20 states have adopted .08 intoxication levels to be consistent with their motor vehicle law. Iowa has no BAC level of intoxication and New Mexico has a limit of .02. Seventeen states have a zero tolerance level for minors; five other states set a limit of .04 or lower for minors. The types of test procedures allowed in most states include breath, blood, and urine. Eleven states allow only blood and breath tests. Six states require sobriety tests to be conducted on shore. Iowa is the only state that does not allow any test.

If contested by the defendant, prosecution for violation of BUI laws can prove more difficult than driving under the influence prosecutions. States were asked if blood, breath, or urine tests were required for evidence in BUI cases. The answers were mixed. Thirty-nine states reported that any one of the tests was required, which represents a 8 state increase since 1995. Twenty-seven states do not require any test for criminal evidence. The types of tests that states allow and require for evidence in prosecution are detailed in state tables at the end of this section.

BOATING UNDER THE INFLUENCE

NUMBER OF STATES THAT:

Have BUI laws for vessels	56
Use refusal of BAC test as grounds for criminal prosecution	50
Set blood alcohol intoxication level at .10	34
Set blood alcohol intoxication level at .08	20
Set zero tolerance intoxication level for minors	17
Require sobriety test to be conducted on shore	6

BOARDING VESSELS

NUMBER OF STATES THAT:

Allow random safety inspections that include boarding	44
Allow random BUI inspections that include boarding	29
Require probable cause to stop a vessel	13
Require probable cause to board a vessel	11

Source: NASBLA Reference Guide to State Boating Laws, Fifth Edition, 1999

When boaters operate a vessel in states where implied consent is the law, they agree to submit to a BUI test at the request of a law enforcement officer. Currently implied consent is the law in 43 states. In 50 states, a refusal to take an intoxication test can be used against a boater for criminal prosecution. Two states have added this condition since 1996.

States were asked how a conviction for BUI affected driving privileges. Forty-six states reported that BUI conviction has no bearing on a person's driving privilege. Nine states have penalties similar to a driving under the influence conviction. Forty-one states utilize BUI saturation patrols; 32 utilize BUI checkpoints, up from 28 last year.

BOARDING VESSELS AND TOWING

When boarding a vessel, probable cause is required by 11 states. Forty-four states allow marine enforcement officers to randomly inspect vessels for safety. Only Mississippi prohibits marine enforcement officers from towing distressed vehicles. Fifty-two states (all but Florida, Maine, South Dakota and Virginia) allow citations for "negligent operation" of watercraft.

PORTABLE BOATING UNDER THE INFLUENCE ENFORCEMENT EQUIPMENT

New to this year's survey are questions related to portable BUI enforcement equipment. Survey results show that 42 states allow the use of portable BUI enforcement equipment.

Thirty-seven states allow portable BUI enforcement equipment to be used for probable cause, and 20 states allow portable BUI enforcement equipment to be used for evidentiary purposes.

DEFINITIONS

Oftentimes, differences in definition can cause confusion in interpreting the law. As part of the survey, boating law administrators were asked to report their state's definition of the following terms as written in statutes or regulations: vessel, person, owner, marine dealer, and personal watercraft.

Vessel is commonly defined as "every description of watercraft used or capable of being used as a means of transportation on water." Other definitions specifically exclude seaplanes from the definition. Some states distinguish between commercial and non-commercial vessels in their definition and others exclude watercraft less than a certain size.

Most states define person as "an individual, partnership, firm, corporation, association, or other legal entity." Other states have slight variations; a few include "agents" of persons in the definition. A few states responded that a person was a boater, operator, or "anyone."

The most common state definition of owner is "a person, other than a lienholder, having the property in or title to a vessel. The term includes a person entitled to the use or possession of a vessel subject to an interest in another person, reserved or created by agreement and securing payment of performance of an obligation, but the term excludes a lessee under a lease not intended as security." A few exceptions exist. Some states only include the first sentence of the preceding definition. A few states don't define the term. At the heart of the definition for most states is legal title of the vessel.

Among states that have a written definition for marine dealer, the most common is very similar to "a person engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling or repairing new or used vessels having an established place of business for the sale, trade, display or repair of motorboats." Variations include a minimum number of boats sold in a year.

State definitions of personal watercraft vary. A complete listing of personal watercraft definitions by state follows this section. Seven states reported no definition or "not defined". A typical definition for personal watercraft is "a motorboat that uses an inboard motor powering a water jet pump or a caged propeller as its primary source of motive power and that is designed to be operated by a person standing on, kneeling on or sitting astride the watercraft." The two elements of the definition include the motive powering mechanism and from what position the craft is operated. Some states only include one of the elements in the definition. Other agencies specify maximize length, size and minimum horsepower requirements.

MARINE LAW ENFORCEMENT POLICY

Section 6 of the survey deals with Marine Law Enforcement policy. The question asked was “Do you have a written, formal marine law enforcement policy, operational procedure, or executive order on ____” which covered 31 subject areas. These 31 policy questions are categorized into the following groups: Transportation & Pursuit, Officer Safety; Officer Aid, Agency Interaction & Investigation, Officer Responsibilities, Officer Training, and Other Agency Policies. Although many agencies reported that there was no formal, written policy covering a specific topic, there was either a local policy or work underway to create a formal policy. California reported that due to decentralization, no formal statewide policies exist. Idaho also has no statewide policies.

TRANSPORTATION & PURSUIT

AGENCIES WITH POLICY COVERING:

Transporting suspects	41
Transporting guests	38
Transporting accident victims	10
On-water pursuit	26
Interstate on-water pursuit	21

TRANSPORTATION & PURSUIT

Forty-one agencies reported that a policy existed covering the transportation of suspects; 38 agencies have a policy covering the transportation of guests. Alabama, American Samoa, Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Florida, New York, the Northern Mariana Islands, Oregon, Utah and the Virgin Islands are the only states which currently have a policy on the transportation of accident victims. Policies covering on-water pursuit are in effect for 26 agencies and interstate on-water pursuit is covered by formal policy for 21 agencies.

OFFICER SAFETY

While officer safety remains a high priority, few agencies have a formal policy covering health topics including skin care safety, back safety and hearing safety. Many agencies reported that even though there may not be a formal policy on these topics, instruction is Twenty-five agencies have a policy on being the first responder at an accident, and 25 agencies have policy governing the towing of distressed vehicles.

AGENCY INTERACTION AND INVESTIGATION

Interaction between local, state and federal agencies is covered by policy in many states. Interaction with federal agencies is covered by policy in 33 agencies; interaction with other state agencies is covered by policy in 29 agencies, and interaction with local agencies is covered by policy in 31 agencies. There are 25 agencies that have a policy for all three interaction categories.

Twenty-six agencies have a policy concerning investigation of theft, while 19 have a policy on the investigation of fraud. All agencies with a policy governing fraud also have a policy governing investigation of theft.

Six state agencies have no policy on substance abuse. Forty-two agencies have policies governing outside employment and 35 agencies have policies on off-duty responsibilities.

OFFICER TRAINING

Policy for firearms training exists in 50 states; California, Guam, Idaho, New Hampshire, Oregon, and Washington are the only states and territory without a firearms training policy. Boating law enforcement is decentralized in the four Western states. Forty-nine states have an in-service training policy.

Use of deadly force is governed in 49 agencies; use of volunteers is governed in 32 agencies; use of BUI checkpoints is governed in 22 agencies. Policies which cover carrying emergency equipment exist in 25 agencies. BOATING SAFETY CASE LAW

Section 7 of the Reference Guide to State Boating Laws deals with the legal aspects of boating safety. States were asked if their state had an attorney general's opinion, a lower court ruling or a superior court ruling regarding many topics including BUI/OUI checkpoints, BUI/OUI saturations, implied consent, probable cause, random safety inspections, negligent operation, PFD wear, seaplanes, boating safety education, numbering and titling, marine sanitation devices, regulating commercial vessels, agency funding, agency interaction and officer safety.

Readers interested in a specific ruling should contact that state's boating law administrator for further information. Boating law administrators' names and phone numbers are listed in Appendix B.
